The EU Parliament labels Russia a terrorist!

Under these circumstances, when the electricity blackouts involved Moldova with respect to Ukraine, and pull events at will, it's too much to ask Santa to have peace for Christmas, and yet when I saw you in Santa clothes, I still hope, Mr. Putin, to put you in their place and stop the drills, that would be a great credit to everyone else's mistakes that appeared in the cabinet.

On Wednesday, the Russian forces intensified the bombing of the critical infrastructure of Ukraine, and this also generated problems in the Republic of Moldova, where a new massive power outage was registered. This power outage also affected the capital Chisinau.

The Cuban Missile Crisis: the Kremlin, Kennedy and the threat of nuclear war | The Times Magazine | The Times

"Early on the morning of October 16, 1962, US President John F Kennedy was presented with secret aerial reconnaissance photos revealing that the Soviet Union had deployed nuclear missiles in Cuba, 90 miles from the US mainland. That revelation triggered the greatest crisis of the Cold War and indeed the greatest threat—so far—to human survival. Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev said afterwards: "We were really on the verge of war." Kennedy's first words were: "We're probably going to have to bomb them." Then he summoned his brother Bobby, the administration's prosecutor, who observed with statesmanlike moderation: "Oh shit! Shit! Shit! Those damn Russians." America's armed forces prepared to invade Fidel Castro's island. At one of the first top-secret White"
