

In your darkness

You may stray
in your darkness
surrounded by the invisible pains of witchdancing knives

Your anxiety like a black coat hides your hair
your eyes deep under the hood

your feet guide you blindly blindfolded by dark thoughts bare bleeding steps in the unknown

one day
one night
you will see a light in the dark when you dare to open your eyes when you dare to raise your eyes

Then
perhaps you will dare
find your way out
from your darkness

to the light
the warmth
I want to give to you because you are you